Bird flu advice for bird shows

Avian influenza (also known as bird flu) is a viral disease that affects birds globally.

Australia remains free from the high pathogenicity avian influenza (HPAI) strain H5N1.

The emergence of this strain overseas has led to extensive deaths in poultry, wild birds and mammals, particularly marine mammals and mammals that prey or scavenge on birds.

There is an increased risk this severe strain will enter Australia and ongoing vigilance and surveillance is required.

Risk from migratory birds

In Australia, wild birds usually waterfowl (e.g. ducks, geese, swans), seabirds and shorebirds can carry bird flu viruses without causing or showing signs of disease.

Bird flu can spillover and spread from wild birds to kept birds.

August to November is considered a high-risk period as large numbers of migratory birds are arriving in Australia. However, waterfowl could arrive all year-round.

What should you do?

- LOOK for signs of bird flu in your birds.
- REPORT suspect cases to Biosecurity Queensland on 13 25 23, or the Emergency Animal Disease Hotline on 1800 675 888 immediately.
- PROTECT your birds – at home and at events.

What to LOOK for?

The bird flu virus is shed in the faeces and respiratory secretions of birds. The virus can spread rapidly between birds or through the movement of contaminated products (e.g. eggs), food, equipment, vehicles, litter/waste materials, clothing and footwear.

Bird flu can persist in the environment for extended periods under favourable environmental conditions.

Signs of infection in birds include:

- lack of coordination, tremors, swimming in circles
- twisted necks or other abnormal posture
- inability to stand or fly
- diarrhoea
- difficulty breathing, coughing or sneezing
- swelling of the head, neck and eyes
- cloudiness or change in colour of eyes
- sudden death.

How do I REPORT sick or dead animals?

If you suspect bird flu in any animal, you must report it to Biosecurity Queensland on 13 25 23 or the Emergency Animal Disease Hotline on 1800 675 888 (available 24/7).

As a nationally notifiable animal disease, anyone who suspects an animal might be infected with bird flu has a legal responsibility to report it as soon as possible.

How do I PROTECT birds?

Any gathering of birds carries the risk of spreading disease, particularly where there is contact between birds from different flocks.

DELIVERING
FOR QUEENSLAND

Queensland
Government

Exhibitors should:

- not take any birds to a show if there are signs of illness in their flock
- avoid handling birds other than their own, unless they thoroughly wash and, ideally, disinfect their hands between birds
- not share equipment between birds from different sources unless it has been thoroughly cleaned and disinfected
- clean and disinfect all equipment, cages and containers before and after a show
- ensure all birds returning home undergo a period of quarantine before re-introduction to the flock
- discard any leftover feed, used floor coverings (e.g. sawdust, straw) or other material at the end of the show in a way that avoids contact with other birds (kept or wild).

Bird show organisers should:

- have a biosecurity plan in place
<https://www.farmbiosecurity.com.au/toolkit/planner/>
- have a veterinarian in attendance or contactable
- ensure any bird that becomes sick at an event is isolated and is assessed by a veterinarian
- where possible, different species of birds should be kept separate. In particular, waterfowl should not be displayed near pigeons, poultry or other birds
- ensure judges thoroughly wash and, ideally, disinfect their hands between handling birds

- ensure show birds cannot come into contact with wild birds, and wild birds cannot access feed and water.

Human health

Although bird flu viruses do not normally infect humans, some strains have been associated with disease in humans.

Standard infection control practices should always be implemented when handling birds, regardless of the perceived risk.
